The Rise of Christianity
This series explores the “making” of Christianity in its first three centuries, with particular attention given to the diversity of early Christian beliefs and the gradual standardization of the new religion.
*Available as a 3-part series.

The Crusades
Europe’s efforts to gain and hold the holy places of Christianity dominated the later Middle Ages, yet the crusading phenomenon is frequently misunderstood in the modern world. This class will address common misconceptions and tell the tale of this fascinating era.
*Available as a 1-part presentation or 3-part series.

The Tudors
The tale of the Tudor dynasty is a tale of England coming of age in the modern world. Marked by larger-than-life rulers, their personalities often distract from the very real advances in government and society England saw in the sixteenth century.
*Available as a 3-part series.

Dr. Phyllis Jestice is professor of European medieval history and chair of the CofC History Department. She specializes in the history of both religion and war---which aren’t always all that far apart.
